

The need for Lawyer Referral

The Alaska Lawyer Referral Service (LRS) was founded as a public service project of the Alaska Bar Association. The LRS averages about 3500 calls annually, with most of those callers referred to a panel attorney in their community. Others are guided to appropriate agencies.

Who calls LRS?

Most callers find they have a legal problem but have never used the services of a lawyer or are new to the community.

Because the LRS is sponsored by the Alaska Bar Association, people using the service are informed that they will be referred to a lawyer who is in good standing, and who will provide them with an initial consultation at a reasonable fee.

The Alaska LRS is beneficial to everyone who uses it. The public benefits when legal services are made available. The individual attorney benefits from a new source of clients. The legal profession benefits through the improvement of its public image and the affirmation of its accessibility to the public.

If you are a member of the Alaska Bar Association and are covered by professional liability insurance, Alaska LRS needs you as a panel member.

How LRS works

The Alaska LRS is organized by areas of law and geographic location. Complete the application for membership on the inside and mail it, along with payment to the Alaska Bar Association.

Potential clients call the Bar office from anywhere in the state. The general nature of their problem is discussed, and if they have a legal problem, they are referred to up to three attorneys in their area. The client is responsible for making the appointment.

Clients are informed by the Bar that the attorney will charge no more than $125 for a ½ hour consultation. After that, the arrangements for any further legal services and fees for those services should be discussed with the attorney.
